Lester Wallack's "Rosedale."

uart Robson in "The Comedy of Errors" at Abbey's.

"Rosedale," Lester Wallack's famous play that was very dear to the hearts the last generation of theatre-goers, vas beautifully presented at the Theatre last night by the Boston Grand Opera-House stock company. The cenery and costumes were very handsome, and the cast included such clever eople as Joseph Haworth, William Mestayer, Frank J. Keenan, Howard Gould, Mark Price, little Olive Smith, Annie Clarke, Isabelle Wesson, Belle Stokes and Charles E. Inslee. A raview of "Rosedale" will appear in "The Even-ing World" to-morrow.

ABBEY'S THEATRE. Stuart Robson revived Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors' at Abbey's Theatre ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

"The Girl I Left Behind Me," Belasco and Fyles's melodrama, that had by no means worn out its welcome when it was withdrawn from the Empire, began a long engagement at the Academy of Music last night. It was staged in a highly realistic manner, and incidents that were hardly more than suggested at the Empire were vividiy pictured. In the cast were Frank Mordaunt, Thomas Oberle, Byron Douglas, James O, Barrows, Odette Tyler, Edna Wallace-Hopper, Sydney Armstrong, and others.

AMERICAN THEATRE

Old Kentucky" transferred itself Fourteenth to Forty-second street, from Fourteenth to Forty-second street, and began a week's engagement at the American Theatre last night. The big race scene went spiendidly and recalled "The Prodigal Daughter" that ran for so long at this theatre. All the "accessories" used at the Academy were seen again. The role of the heroine, Madge Brierly, was played once more by Bettina Gerard.

COLUMBUS THEATRE.

COLUMBUS THEATRE.

Corinne, a cunning little actress, of whom New York sees far too little, appeared at the Columbus Theatre, Harlem, last night, in the leading role of "Hendrick Hudson," a bur esque that has been greatly improved since it was last presented in this city. Corinne was as bright and attractive as ever, and the company was a very good one. "Hendrick Hudson" is full of up-to-date specialties.

HARLEM OPERA-HOUSE. HARLEM OPERA-HOUSE.

Charles H. Hoyt's little bit of satirical frivoilty, known as "A Temperance Town," was the attraction at Hammerstein's Harlem Opera-House last night. The portions of this play that please best are those that do not attempt to point a moral. The audience laughed at the fun, for they recognized in it Mr. Hoyt's early humor. George Richards and Eugene Canfield did very good work.

GRAND GEERA-HOUSE.

GRAND GEERA-HOUSE.

"Killarney," a romantic Irish drama that had a run at the Star Theatre a year and a half ago, was acted last night at the Grand Opera-House. The author of the play is Con T. Murphy, and his work shows that he has a keen acquaintance with audiences who are fond of Irish drama. Miss Katle Emmett, a very clever little lady, played the star part and seng some catchy songs. PECPLE'S THEATRE.

"Poor Girls," the play recently presented at the American Theatre, was seen by the patrons of the People's Theatre last night. That it pleased them greatly was very evident; in fact, the piece went much better downtown than uptown. The play is a highly interesting one, and the story of the two heroines—or rather of the heroine and her stater—is very felicitously told. The cast was a good one.

TONY PASTOR'S

TONY PASTOR'S. TONY PASTOR'S.

F. "nk Bush returned to Tony Pastor's last night, and was made exceedingly welcome. He was as funny as ever, and many of his stories appeared to be new. Tony Pastor almed his comic songs at the audience, and so did Bessie Bellwood and Lottle Glison. Other artists were Isabelia Carlini, Mechan and Archmere and the American juggler, Leonzo.

KOSTER & BIAL'S.

There were no dull moments at Koster & Bial's Concert Hall last night. The entertainment was an enjoyable one from start to finish. Sandow accomplished some new feats. Mile. Arman d'Arny sang a new song, and Unthan, the "armless wonder," showed once more that feet can be made to do the work of hands. Among the other entertainers were Alide Capitaine, Ena Bertoldi and the Detorelli brothers.

The butter-making contest, in which ten Kilkenny girls participate, has proved to be a great attraction at Doris's Eighth Avenue Museum, where it entered upon a second week yesterday. Samples of butter are distributed among the feminine visitors, and the present of samples is, as we all know, very dear to the feminine heart. "Kathleen Mayourneen" was the dramatic feature of the theatorium.

There were two strong women at Huber's Fourteenth Street Museum yeaterday—Mme. Yucca and Mme. La Blanche—and their wonderful feats were watched with much interest. In the curlo halls were also Cotton's trained donkeys, Morrisey and La Mar, Fiji Jim and Annie, Balbroma, Olga, and Prof. Stover with his views of the Midway Plaisance. Two vaudeville companies occupied the theatre.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.

NIBLO'S GARDEN. "Sport McAllister" is not a classic, but a roaring farce-comedy, and as such the audience at Niblo's Garden last night received it. The play itself is perhaps of less importance than its star, the humorous and popular "Bobby" Gaylor. Mr. Gaylor's presence was an inducement to incessant laughter. Dagmar

PARK THEATRE. The Scandinavian hero of "Yon Yonson" met with much favor at the Park Theatre last night. He had the sympathies of the audience from the very beginning, and never relaxed his hold. The interpreter of this role was Gus Heege, who has built up the part very creditabiy. Miss Victory Bateman played the leading feminine role, and Merri Osborne and Sadle Connelly contributed excellent sketches.

H. R. JACOBS' THEATRE.

"The Pride of Mayo," the latest thing in Irish dramas, by Dan McCarthy, was seen for the first time in New York at H. R. Jacobs' Theatre yesterday. Its story is a good one, and many of the cut-and-dried features of the Irish play are advantageously absent. It was very creditably staged. Dan McCarthy himself appeared in the cast, and so did Charles Saunders and Lou Ripley.

Corbett Talks About Himself and His Affair with Jackson.

A Pittsburg Writer Comments on New York's Chances.

"What do I think of Jackson's measurements?" said Jim Corbett last night, "Well, to tell you the truth, I haven't bigger than I am, I hear. He and I are built on different plans. My development does not show up big. I am developed champion gave some idea of what he meant by drawing his fists up under his arm-pits, his shoulders and chest expanding like a balloon. He seemed to have suddenly grown several sizes. It was apparently muscle-not inflationthat caused the increase.

Jackson than I have yet been in the ring" said Corbett. "I shall probably weigh over 190 pounds. When I met Jackson before I only weighed 168. I weighed 178 when I fought Sulliso, you see, I have been putting on tive height of Jackson and me, I an tive height of Jackson and me, I am under the impression that he is a little taller." Corbett expects to sail for England about April 7, his father and mother accompanying him. The "Gentleman Jack" Company will open at the Drury Lane Theatre, London. It is very improbable now that the fight will take place in June, as, according to agreement, the men must wait three months after signing articles.

A Pittsburg baseball writer, who is not afflicted with the jealousy which seems to be troubling some of the other Western critics because New York is trying to get a winning team this year, has this to say of the New Yorks:

"They mean business this season, and both Pittsburg and Boston are in for trouble with Ward's men. The expenditure of 10,000 cold dollars to purchase Van Haltren, Farrell and Meakin has not been done for nothing, and the Giants will give a hard fight. In Farrell, Russe will find what he has been looking for for years—a man who can handle his swift delivery handly. The team was handleapped by this greatly last year. Milligan could stop Rusie, but he couldn't throw, while other better throwing catchers couldn't stand in front of the Hoosier boy's awful speed."

Sport and Play, an English cycling paper, says: "Messrs, M. F. Dirnberger, J. P. Bliss and E. C. Baid, three well-known American riders, are packing their trunks preparatory to coming to England. I understand they are coming as amateurs, and if this is the case, must most strongly protest against their being licensed by the N. C. U. Fair play comes before hospitality, and anything more calculated to bring the N. C. U. into disrepute than to allow Americans privileges not granted our countrymen I cannot imagine."

The latest out-of-town entry to the A. A. U. boxing championships at the Garden, March 19 and 21, is Michael J. Reilly, of the Michigan A. A., of Detroit. Reilly is a light-weight, and is said to be a likely man. The Pittsburg A. C. sends the entry of John McGrew, its best 125-pound boxer.

Jim Corbett intends making his wife a present of a house in New York City before he goes abroad. The puglist and his wife had selected on a house in West End avenue, but at the last moment the price was raised $500 and the deal didn't go through.

The London Sportsman says it has been all but settled that Corbett and Jackson will meet at the National Sport-ing Club. . . . The project of the Yale University Tennis Association for securing proper grounds has apparently been abandoned.
